Real Emotional Intelligence

If it were as easy as simply “thinking” about success then everyone would have it. Thinking is the domain of the conscious mind. Research shows that you are only really using your conscious mind about 5% of the time. This means that you spend about 95% of your time running on automatic habitual programs that are stored at the unconscious level. This includes all of your emotional responses. These automatic responses can sabotage even the clearest goals and intentions. Real emotional intelligence is the missing clue to success. If you want to develop real leadership skills and breakthrough results then you must learn to master and modify your emotions and the emotional response to others.

Surprisingly, only 7% of any communication is dependent on the words used. The rest of the message is comprised of communication that is out of your conscious awareness. The problem with most communication is that the words are not congruent with the unconscious cues in voice tonality and body language. Learning to leverage the power of this 93% will get you your desired results in any presentation setting be it a sales meeting, group training, employee meeting or corporate presentation. These are the secrets of world class presenters.
